ROSE-COLORED GLASSES

IT'S really amazing, the things that can happen to a guy when he ain't looking! Me, I'm the original hard luck kid, and if trouble's out looking for a likely prospect to put the old whammy on, I'll be the number one customer every time! All of which is my way of telling you that what happened to me just couldn't possibly happen to anyone else. Oh sure, when you get finished with this account of my misadventure, you'll say I made it up out of my own weak head. Just too fantastic to believe, eh? Well, even if I know you're gonna take that attitude, I'm gonna tell you my story anyway!

It all started on a rainy day. It was really pouring down on this particular day, and I just gave up all hope of the sky clearing before late afternoon. That meant I would have to find something to amuse myself with inside the house. Well, I didn't feel like reading, so I thought it might be a good idea to go up to the attic and see what kind of treasure I could discover in the old trunks stored away up there. I used to do this pretty often when I was a small kid, but sort of got away from the practice. But on this particular rainy day, I suddenly thought it would be an interesting idea and might produce some fascinating discoveries. So up to the attic I went.

The old trunks were still there, with inches of dust on them. But that didn't discourage me. In fact, the idea that they had not been opened for many long years made me all the more curious to open them now and rediscover their contents. In fact, it had been such a long time since I had last examined the old relics hidden away in these old trunks, that I couldn't really recall what they contained. Clothes, maybe. Old letters? Trinkets? As I thought about it, I could hardly control my eagerness to slip open the latches and draw open the covers.

Okay, so after much pushing, pulling and straining, I managed to force the lid up. Years of keeping them closed had made the lids stick tight... I only hoped I wouldn't have as much trouble with the other two trunks as I had with this one! So what did I find in this first one? Old newspapers and magazines. Old letters with stamps from different parts of the world. Photographs of old members of the family, many of whom I had never met. A few old garments, and that was all in the first trunk. Now for the second one. The same story there ... it took a lot of effort to open it, and I found it contained more of the same items as the first trunk ... old magazines, newspapers, letters and pictures. Okay, now for the third trunk. Then suddenly I realized something. During the years since I had last come up into the attic to search for "treasure" in the trunks, I had forgotten that there had always been only two trunks! So where did this third trunk come from all of a sudden? Quite a mystery, you must admit, and I really got after that third trunk with excited eagerness. Then I recalled that my old uncle George had brought the trunk with him after returning from a round-the-world trip to stay with us for a while. Poor uncle George had died in our house, and his old trunk was still here in the attic.

At last the latch gave way, and I drew open the lid. The first thing that I saw were several small trinkets, such as might be worn by natives of African jungles. Well, I thought, nothing very strange about them ... anybody could buy such souvenir objects in any shop in the coastal cities of Africa. But then I noticed a small black case partly concealed by these various trinkets. The case was about the size of those used to hold eye glasses, and I figured my uncle George used to keep his glasses in them. Nothing unusual about an eye glass case, eh? That's what you think, chum! Because this case contained a certain kind of glasses that are out of this world, and if you'll just be patient and read on, you'll see that I mean just that ... out of this world! I opened the case and sure enough found a pair of glasses in them ... but not the familiar tortoise shell kind uncle George used to wear. No sir! These glasses had rose-colored lenses, and brother, hold on to your hat ... I slipped the glasses on to see what I could see, and believe you me, I didn't see a rose-colored world!

SENT ON APPROVAL—MAKE AMAZING 10-DAY TEST

Everything was in a mass of colors . . . like the rainbow . . . blue, red, yellow, green, pink and what have you! And as if that wasn't strange enough, I no longer found myself looking at the attic room which I was standing in! No sir! I was standing out on a desert somewhere, all by my lonesome! No attic, no house, no rain even! There I was standing out on a hot desert, wearing my rose-colored glasses! Fantastic, you say? You're right! But it happened! If you're still holding on to your hat, get a tighter grip on it, chum, because the best is yet to come! I was standing there no more than two minutes, when I saw these things coming toward me along the sands of the desert!

Well, at least I'd have company, I thought. But oh how I wish that company had never come my way! Because when they got closer, I saw that they were not like anything I had ever seen before! No sir! These characters were the craziest creatures you or I or anybody ever saw! They looked like huge frogs, with bulging eyes, webbed hands and feet, and spotted green skins!

Yipes! And these creatures had to talk English yet! One of them stared at me and said, "Welcome to the X dimension!" Oh ho, I thought to myself, at least that explained a few things! Looking out through the rose-colored glasses gave me a perfect view of another dimension, out of my own normal world! So the X dimension existed in a desert world and these creeps inhabited this world! Well, might as well be friendly, I thought, so I put on my sweetest smile and thanked the creep for his welcome.

"You are the first one to visit us since George left!" the same creature that had spoken before said. So uncle George had paid them a visit too, eh? And then the thought occurred to me . . . where did uncle George get the rose-colored glasses in the first place? I asked the frog-man about this

"Oh, one of our great scientists invented them!" he said. "He made them so that we could move over into your dimension and take a look at your world! But the fool lost them somewhere, and George found them. When he put them on, he moved into dimension X, and that's how we were able to meet him. George spent quite a bit of time with us!"

Yep, uncle George really got around in his travels! The frog-man continued, "The scientist died without leaving behind his secret formula for grinding the special lenses, so we have never been able to move into your dimension. But now that you are here, you can hand the glasses over to me, and I'll put them on and visit in your world for a while! You know, George used to tell us about the wonderful lakes and rivers in your world, and as you can see, we live in a desert world here. Water is scarce, and if I like your dimension, well, I might just decide to stay there!"

Now you can imagine my horror at this thought! What if his fellow frog-men should think of analyzing the lenses on the glasses and come up with the secret of how they were made, then make thousands of them, and all those horrible creatures would decide to move over into our world? It might be quite disastrous! This would never do, I thought!

So I decided to act fast. As the creep reached out to take the glasses off my face, I quickly took them off myself, dropped them to the ground and crushed them under my leather heels! They broke into tiny fragments! I looked up to see what was the reaction of the frog-men . . . but they had suddenly disappeared from view! In fact, I was no longer in the desert, but found myself once again standing in the attic room, in front of uncle George's trunk!

For a moment I thought it had all been just a wild hallucination. But when I looked down at the floor, I saw the rose-colored glasses ground to bits under my heel! Well, to this day, I thank my lucky stars that I had acted fast and destroyed the glasses. No telling what this world of ours would come to if those frog-men had moved over from X dimension and taken over our world!

So I kinda figure I saved the world, you know what I mean? Sure, it's a fantastic story, and I don't really expect you to believe it really happened to me! But I'll tell you one thing, chum . . . I'll never go up into the attic again and look for "treasure" in old trunks. No telling what I might find!

THE END E-85
